

San Francisco Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve

San Francisco Bay in California has lost most of its historic tidal wetlands due to development pressures within and around the Bay. This Reserve encompasses 3,710 acres at two locations within the estuary, both of which include tidal wetlands and undeveloped uplands. The Reserve was established in 2003.

Photo by: Jessica Schneider

JULY

"The Narragansett Bay Research Reserve Celebrates 30 years of Research, Education, and Stewardship."

2010

